The Series

Salisbury leads 7-1, including a 42-35 overtime win at Chowan last year. The Gulls have won three straight in the series. SU also won the first four meetings between the teams from 1994-97 before the Braves captured their first win in 1998. The scores:

1994	SAL 35, CC 2
1995	SAL 21, CC 6
1996	SAL 23, CC 0
1997	SAL 28, CC 17
1998	CC 26, SAL 10
1999	SAL 31, CC 27
2000	SAL 19, CC 7
2001	SAL 42, CC 35 (ot)

Last Year's Game
Salisbury registered its most dramatic victory of the season with a come-from-behind 42-35 overtime win at Chowan. The Sea Gulls rallied from a 21-point second half deficit as they recorded their first-ever overtime win. RB Tony Ellis keyed the second half comeback as he rushed for a season-high 181 yards and scored four touchdowns. Ellis' fourth score of the day came in overtime as he swept into the endzone from 20-yards out. He had tied the game with just 33 seconds left in regulation with a six-yard touchdown run. Following Ellis' overtime TD, Chowan had one possession remaining. The Sea Gulls secured the win when DT Tom McCarthy sacked Chowan QB Chris Stodgill, forced a fumble on the play, then recovered the fumble to end the game.

Boyce Receives ACFC Honors
Senior fullback Reggie Boyce (pictured on the cover) was named the Atlantic Central Football Conference's Offensive Player of the Week after rushing for a season-high 155 yards and two touchdowns in SU's 41-12 win at Gallaudet. Boyce scored on runs of two and 67 yards while averaging 11.9 yards per attempt. He recorded his second 100+ game of the season and raised his season average to 87.2 yds/game. Boyce is also tied for fourth on the team in scoring with 18 points through five games.

Statistically Speaking
The Sea Gulls continue to rank among the national leaders in several offensive categories. Salisbury is second in the nation in rushing offense with an average of 378.2 ypg. The Gulls are also in the top 25 in total offense (461.4 ypg) and scoring offense (36.8 ppg). Defensively, SU is allowing 16.2 ppg, with opponents averaging 267 yards/game (103 rushing/164 passing).

Ellis, Johnson Lead Offense
Senior running back Tony Ellis and freshman QB Dustin Johnson continue to fuel the Sea Gull offense. Despite finishing with just seven yards on two attempts in last week's game due to an injury, Ellis leads the Gulls on the season with a 113.6 ypg rushing average. He also tops the squad in scoring with 42 points. Ellis needs 178 more yards to become SU's all-time rushing leader. Johnson is averaging 97.6 ypg rushing and 61.0 ypg passing. He has rushed for five touchdowns and passed for six. Senior WR Kevin Belt has a team-leading 10 receptions.

DeHaven, Deming Pace the Defense
With a team-leading nine tackles in last week's game, sophomore LB Brad DeHaven has assumed the team lead in season tackles with 38. Freshman DT Andrew Deming is second on the team with 34 total tackles, including a team-high 12 tackles for loss (-51 yds). DeHaven is second with nine TFL (-23 yds). Deming also leads the team with six quarterback sacks. The defense recorded three interceptions in last week's game and now has eight for the year.

Scouting the Braves
Chowan, which had an open date last week, has not played since dropping a 29-22 decision at Newport News on September 28. The Braves generated their highest point total of the season in that game while also finishing with 306 total yards in offense. Three quarterbacks have split time through the first four games, with freshman Josh Floyd the probable starter after passing for 284 yards and three touchdowns against Newport News. Senior Jawarren Coles leads the rushing attack with an average of 67.5 ypg. WR Brian Harwell leads the team with nine receptions and four touchdowns. Former NFL head coach Lou Saban is serving in his first full season as Chowan's head coach. Saban coached in the NFL with the Broncos, Patriots and Bills.

Varsity Club Luncheons
The SU Varsity Club continues to host its weekly football luncheons with Head Coach Sherman Wood. The luncheons are each Thursday at noon in the Salisbury Commons on campus and the public is cordially invited to attend. The luncheons will continue every Thursday through the end of the season. The cost of the luncheon is $6.05 plus tax per person, which includes an all-you-can-eat a la carte menu, as well as beverages and dessert. Reservations are not necessary.

Sea Gull Nibbles
Eleven different Sea Gull players finished with at least one rushing attempt in last week's game at Gallaudet...TE Chuck Slate and WR Joseph Early registered their first pass receptions of the season last week...The defense limited Gallaudet to 84 total yards and four first downs...Sean Sandora, Greg Cannon and freshman Sam Foreman recorded their first interceptions of the year in last week's contest...Salisbury has converted 20 of 54 (37%) third-down attempts and seven of 12 (58%) fourth-down attempts through five games...Punter Rick Nistler is averaging 37.7 yards per kick...Freshman kicker Eric Knight converted two of two extra point attempts last week...The Sea Gulls have an open date in the schedule next week, then close the year with three of four games against ACFC opponents...SU's next game is on October 26 against Newport News Apprentice in the Oyster Bowl game in Hampton, VA.

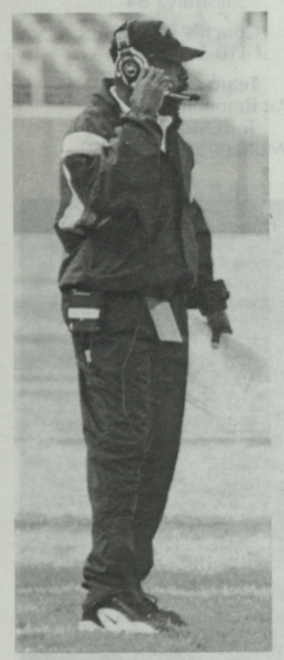
Head Coach Sherman Wood

Wood's Words

"I like the athletic ability that we have at all positions this year. Our goal as coaches is to help the players limit their mistakes and to get our players focused on the season.

"Our goal this year is to win our conference championship. Some of the best teams on our schedule are in our conference, so if we do well against them, we should fare well against some of the non-conference teams also. We know that winning the conference is a high goal, but we think it's truly realistic. We've been very close in the past...we think our time has come."



Sherman Wood is in his fourth season at his Alma Mater in 2002 and his 10th season as a collegiate head coach. Despite a 4-6 final record in 2001, Wood can point to a number of highlights that dotted his third season back on the Eastern Shore. The Sea Gulls played a school-record three overtime contests and finished the season with 10 players receiving all-conference honors. Wood guided his team to the first overtime victory in SU history, and also finished just three points shy of capturing the Regents Cup Trophy for the second consecutive year.

Exciting games and historic achievements are nothing new for Wood, who returned to his Alma Mater as head football coach in April, 1999. A 1984 graduate of the University and a four-year letterman on the Sea Gull football team, Wood is the sixth head coach in Salisbury football history. He returned to Salisbury after spending six years as the head coach at Bowie State (MD) University.

For the second straight year, Salisbury produced the Atlantic Central Football Conference's Rookie of the Year. Freshman DB Milo Austin claimed the honor in 2001 after QB Mac Mollet earned the award in 2000. All told, under Wood's direction, the Sea Gulls have produced 27 all-conference performers in three seasons. Salisbury also had the conference's co-Offensive Player of the Year in 1999 in RB Myron Dent. The Gulls have had a 1,000-yard rusher in two of Wood's three seasons as head coach, just the eighth and ninth time in the program's history to accomplish that feat.

Wood, 41, played defensive back for the Sea Gulls from 1980-1983, during the tenure of two different head coaches. Bill Yeagle served as the head coach during Wood's first two seasons, before Mike McGlinchey took over as head coach in 1982. Wood finished with seven career interceptions, including two returns for touchdown, and was a starter and team captain on the 1983 team that earned SU's first-ever NCAA Tournament berth and advanced to the national semifinals.

Wood still holds the Sea Gull record for most career interception return yards with 131. He earned all-state defensive back honors by The (Baltimore) Sun and recognition as a Street & Smith All-American during his career.

Wood began his collegiate coaching career as a volunteer assistant under McGlinchey in 1984 and became a graduate assistant coach for the Sea Gulls in 1985. He moved to Bowie State as a graduate assistant coach in 1986, coaching the defensive backs and special teams.

He became a full-time assistant coach with the Bulldogs in 1988, assuming the duties of assistant head coach and defensive coordinator. He remained at Bowie State as an assistant coach until 1992, when he became the assistant head football coach at Virginia Union. One year later, in 1993, Wood returned to Bowie State as head coach.

Wood inherited a Bowie State program that finished 1-10 in the season before he arrived. He compiled a 23-37-1 record in six seasons at the NCAA Division II school. The team's 6-3 record in 1998 was its best in 10 years. Bowie State was ranked 16th in the nation in total defense in 1998 (268.7 ypg), second in the nation in pass defense (106.9 ypg), and 10th in the nation in scoring defense (14.0 ppg).

During Wood's tenure at Bowie State, he coached six Coca-Cola/Sportsview Scholar-Athlete Award winners and a national Burger King Scholar-Athlete of the Week winner. He had three players earn all-CIAA honors in 1998, and one player who received all-South Atlantic Region honors.

Originally from Norfolk, VA, Wood is a member of the American Football Coaches Association and serves the organization on its All-America Selection Committee, Rules Committee, and Summer Manual Committee.

An active member of the community, Wood is a speaker at numerous sports clinics and involves himself in a variety of local organizations. These groups include: the Special Olympics, the Jazz Foundation, the Wicomico Youth Mentor Program and the Salisbury Middle School Gentlemen's Club, among others.

In addition to his bachelor's degree from Salisbury University, Wood earned his master's degree from Bowie State. He and his wife Tonya have one daughter, Sherece, 17.

Assistant Coaches

Robb Disbennett
Defensive Coordinator

A former all-America quarterback for the Sea Gulls and a 1996 inductee to SU Athletics Hall of Fame, Disbennett is in his 12th season on the Salisbury staff. Disbennett owned virtually every team passing record when he graduated in 1986, and still claims the marks for most touchdown passes in a season and career, highest completion percentage for a season, and most consecutive passes completed. Under Disbennett's tutelage, Salisbury finished ranked 14th in the nation in passing in 1993 and 1994. He is serving his third season as the team's defensive coordinator in 2002. Disbennett resides in Hebron, MD, with his wife, Marcy and daughters, Mackensie and Leah.

Doug Fleetwood
Offensive Coordinator

One of the most successful prep coaches on the Eastern Shore, Fleetwood is in his third season as a member of the Sea Gull football staff. Fleetwood returned to his Alma Mater in 2000 after serving as the head coach at Cambridge-South Dorchester High School for 21 years, where he compiled a 190-50 overall record. His teams won three Maryland state championships (1979, 1995, 1996) and made 16 playoff appearances during his tenure. The Cambridge, MD, native also serves as head coach of the Sea Gull baseball program, with a two-year record of 63-26-3, including SU's first World Series appearance in 2001.

Rob Grande
Head of Football Operations/ Linebackers

Grande is in his third year as SU's operations director in addition to his coaching duties with the linebackers. Grande, who concluded his Sea Gull placekicking career in 1991, is serving his 10th season overall as a member of the staff. Grande finished second on the team in scoring as a senior with 31 points. His previous duties with the team included stints as the kicking coach, linebackers coach and special teams coordinator. He and his wife Penny reside in Salisbury and have a son, Sean.

Chris Morandi
Strength and Conditioning/ Offensive Line

A three-year letterman for the Sea Gulls, Morandi is in his third year as the team's strength and conditioning coach, overseeing in-season and off-season player workouts. He also serves as a position coach, working primarily this season with the offensive line, and assistants with the SU track & field team in the spring. Morandi started all nine games on the Sea Gull defensive line as a senior in 1999 and finished fifth on the team with 38 tackles, including six TFL.

Ryan Fleetwood
Quarterbacks/WRs

A former all-state quarterback and All-American baseball player at Cambridge South Dorchester High School, Fleetwood returns for his third season as an assistant. He will work primarily with the quarterbacks and wide receivers. Fleetwood, who was a scholarship pitcher at the University of Maryland, still holds a number of Maryland high school passing records and ranks among the all-time state leaders in career TD passes and passing yards.

Art Johnstone
Offensive Line

Johnstone joins the two Fleetwoods as another member of the SU staff with links to Cambridge-South Dorchester High School. He served as the assistant football coach from 1971-99 and was a key part of all three state championships during that span. Originally from Cambridge, OH, Johnstone will coach the offensive line again this season. He and his wife Iris have three children, Patrick (25), Jill (22) and Jake (16).

Ron Dickerson
Running Backs

Dickerson joins the staff this season after a long and successful tenure as the head coach at Seaford (DE) High School. Dickerson won two state championships at Seaford during his 28-year career and ranks first in the Henlopen Conference and fourth in the state of Delaware in coaching victories. He and his wife Marsha reside in Laurel, DE, and have three sons: Craig, Marc (a former Sea Gull letterman) and Jeff.

Paul Duffy
Defensive Line

A four-year Sea Gull letterman, Duffy begins his first season as an assistant coach. Duffy was a three-year starter on the defensive line and served as one of the team captains as a senior in 2001. Duffy finished second among the linemen with 20 tackles last season, including three TFL (-9 yds) and one sack. The Columbia, MD, native is also working toward his M.B.A. in the Perdue Business School at SU.

Dante Trader
Defensive Backs

A four-year starter as a cornerback at Widener (PA) College, Trader begins his first season with the Sea Gulls in 2002. Trader led the Pioneers in pass breakups as a senior while earning all-conference and all-ECAC honors. Widener advanced to the national semifinals of the 2000 NCAA Division III Championship Tournament. The Delmar, DE, native was also a national track All-American in the 4 x 100 relay.

Chuck Goldstein
Linebackers

Goldstein is in his first season as an assistant after concluding his Sea Gull career in 2000. Goldstein, originally from Germantown, MD, was a starting linebacker for the Gulls after joining the program as a junior transfer. He finished sixth on the team in 2000 with 40 tackles, including eight tackles for loss and three sacks.

Team Captains

"I'm thrilled to have these four young men selected by their teammates as our captains," says Head Coach Sherman Wood. "They each have some very special qualities and provide a great blend and mixture in leadership for our team. I'm also pleased with the balance that we have among our captains this year, with two offensive players and two defensive players."

Four players have been selected by their teammates as the captains for the 2002 Salisbury University football team. They are LB Pat Brannan, RB Tony Ellis, OL Muhammid Husainey and DT Tom McCarthy. A closer look at this year's team captains:

Pat Brannan
Linebacker
Lutherville, MD (Loyola HS)

Brannan returns for his third season as a team captain and fifth season with the program after receiving an extra season of eligibility due to last year's season-endincxinjury...Brannan suffered a broken arm in the third game of the 2001 season and was unable to return to action...A starter since his freshman season, he led the team in tackles as a sophomore and junior...Brannan received first team all-conference honors in 2000 after leading the league with 105 total tackles, including 46 solo...He added nine tackles for loss (-30 yards), three sacks (-18) and two pass interceptions...He earned second team all-conference accolades in 1999 while finishing second in the ACFC with 10.7 tackles per game (and 97 overall)... Brannan registered a conference single-game best and a personal career-high of 19 tackles against the College of New Jersey in 1999.

Tony Ellis
Running Back
Vienna, VA (Madison HS)

Ellis is serving in his first season as a team captain and could finish his career as Salisbury's all-time leading rusher...Ellis enters the 2002 season with 2,904 career yards, ranking fourth in Salisbury history...He also ranks sixth in career scoring with 180 points...The Vienna, VA, native owns two of the top five rushing performances in team history, including an ACFC record of 255 yards against Greensboro in 2000...His total of 1,287 yards in 2000 ranks as the second highest single-season total in Sea Gull history.

Tom McCarthy
Defensive Line
Olney, MD (DeMatha HS)

McCarthy returns for his third season as a starter and first as a team captain...A very consistent performer, he had 38 total tackles in 2000 and 37 tackles in 2001...He led the Sea Gull linemen in tackles last season after finishing second among the linemen as a sophomore... McCarthy received honorable mention all-ACFC recognition in 2000 after registering 11 tackles for loss and three QB sacks...He has also earned ACFC all-Academic honors in each of the past two seasons...McCarthy, who can play both the tackle and end position, enters the 2002 season with 18 career tackles for loss and five QB sacks.

Muhammid Husainey
Offensive Line
Vero Beach, FL (St. Edwards HS)

Husainey returns for his second year as a starter and will once again serve as one of the anchors on the offensive line...Started all 10 games last year at the tackle position and helped the Sea Gulls average 187.5 yards per game rushing...The Gulls had four games of 200-yards or more, including a season-high of 297 yards rushing in the overtime victory against Ferrum... Husainey and the offensive line also ushered four individual 100-yard rushing games in 2001...The only junior among this year's four captains.

The University

Mission Statement

Salisbury University's mission is to cultivate and sustain a superior, student-centered learning community where students, faculty and staff are viewed as both teachers and learners, and where a commitment to excellence permeates all aspects of University life. We recruit exceptional and diverse faculty, staff, undergraduate and graduate students and support them as they work together to reach the University's goals. Serving Maryland and the Mid-Atlantic region, we are concerned participants in responding to the educational, economic, cultural and social needs of our community and believe that service is a vital component of civic life. Our highest purpose is to empower our students with the knowledge, skills and core values that contribute to life-long learning and active citizenship in a democratic society and interdependent world.

Values

The core values of Salisbury University are excellence, student-centeredness, learning, community, civic engagement and diversity. We believe these values must be lived and experienced as integral to everyday campus life so that students make the connection between what they learn and how they live.

Excellence: Excellence, the standard against which all University activities and outcomes are measured, connotes the perfection and the quality for which we strive and hold ourselves accountable. We accept the notion that the quality of a university depends on the heads and hearts of those in it.

Student-Centeredness: Our students are the primary reason for our existence. Our focus is on their academic and individual success and on their health and well-being. We are committed to helping students learn to make reasoned decisions and to be accountable for the outcomes of the decisions they have made.

Learning: We believe that learning is fundamental to living a life with purpose in an increasingly interrelated world and that our role is to teach students not what to think, but how to think. The University introduces students to a system of ideas about the nature of humanity, the universe, and the world created by art and thought. Through active learning, service learning, international experience and co-curricular activities, students connect research to practice, and theory to action.

Community: Salisbury University takes pride in being a caring and civil place where individuals accept their obligations to the group, learn through their interactions and relationships with others, where governance is shared, and where the focus is on the common good. We honor the heritage and traditions of the institution which serve as a foundation for future change.

Civic Engagement: The University stands as a part of, rather than apart from, the local and regional community. Recognizing its history and traditions, we seek to improve the quality of life for citizens in the region. We believe it is our responsibility to enrich cultural life, enhance the conduct of public affairs and contribute to the advancement of the region. We seek to instill in our students a lifelong commitment to civic engagement.

Diversity: Salisbury University views itself as a just community where there is respect for the value of global, societal and individual differences and commitment to equal opportunity. Diversity is purposefully cultivated as a way to strengthen and enhance our University community.

Keep an Eye On...

Game: Appalachian State at Georgia Southern; October 19 at Allen E. Paulson Stadium
Last Meeting: Georgia Southern 27, Appalachian State 18 (10/13/01 at Appalachian State)
Breakdown: It's head coach Mike Sewak's first year on the job, and he's had to do it without the services of superstar running back Adrian Peterson, who has graduated. However, the Eagles' vaunted ground game will still be dangerous with seniors Mark Myers and Zzream Walden garnering the bulk of the carries. The Mountaineers hope a strong defensive line, led by senior Josh Jeffries, can close the gaps and slow the Eagles down.

Game: Notre Dame at Florida State; October 26 at Doak Campbell Stadium
Last Meeting: Florida State 31, Notre Dame 26 (1/1/96 at Pro Player Stadium in Orange Bowl)
Breakdown: This will be the rekindling of a rivalry that is best remembered for the Irish's 1993 victory over Heisman winner Charlie Ward and the Seminoles, which was followed by controversy as Florida State still won the national championship. Nowadays, both programs are trying to regain some past glory. After a one-year fizzle, the Seminoles have returned to the top of the ACC, whereas first-year Notre Dame coach Tyrone Willingham still has some work to do for a rebound in South Bend.

Game: Tennessee at South Carolina; November 2 at Williams-Brice Stadium
Last Meeting: Tennessee 17, South Carolina 10 (10/27/01 at Neyland Stadium)
Breakdown: Phillip Fulmer and Lou Holtz, two of the game's all-time-winningest active coaches, go head-to-head in one of the marquee matchups in the log-jammed East Division of the SEC. The versatile Corey Jenkins is behind center for the Gamecocks this season. Some question his arm strength, but when he scrambles outside of the pocket, there aren't many better. There are no questions about Casey Clausen's abilities, which, coupled with sure-handed Kelley Washington, make the Vols offense hard to contain.

Did you know?

- This marks the first time Notre Dame will visit Doak Campbell Stadium—the teams' four previous meetings took place in South Bend (twice), Orlando and Miami.
- Florida State's only loss to Notre Dame came in 1993, the year the Seminoles won their first national championship.
- All four previous matchups have been decided by seven points or less.

LEADERS OF THE PAC

RECENT HISTORY HAS SHOWN THAT THE WAY TO WIN A PAC-10 CHAMPIONSHIP IS WITH A TOP-NOTCH QUARTERBACK. THAT TREND SHOULD HOLD UP THIS YEAR

Oregon's Joey Harrington did it last year. Washington's Marques Tuiasosopo did it the year before. Stanford's Todd Husak did it the year before that. UCLA's Cade McNown did it the year before that. And Washington State's Ryan Leaf before them.

Want to keep going? Surely you remember Arizona State's Jake "The Snake" Plummer. He did it, too.

It is taking his game to another level, and in turn taking his team to another level.

The Pac-10 these days is a quarterback-driven league, just as much as the old Big Eight used to be an option-driven conference. The winner of the Pac-10 might have a good running back, a strong defense, amazing special teams, or all of the above. But as has been the case in recent years, the Pac-10 champion often has a special quarterback, a veteran guy who takes his game up a notch, a guy who puts his team on his shoulders and takes it with him. All of the above were seniors when they put it together, with the exception of Leaf, who was a junior.

Which begs the question: Who is going to do it this year?

The obvious candidate isn't quite so identifiable as Joey Harrington last season, but two or three can be pointed to as strong possibilities.

Washington State's Jason Gesser, USC's Carson Palmer and Washington's Cody Pickett are the quarterbacks several Pac-10 coaches are pointing to this season.

"Those guys come to mind simply because they had some games last year where you went 'Wow,'" says Oregon coach Mike Bellotti. "And they have some pretty good skill people around them. If I had to pick, I'd say Gesser, simply because his performances have tended to be the most consistent."

Not since the days of Leaf have Cougars fans been so excited. Gesser, even though he has to share a little bit of his time with backup Matt Kegel, has showen those fans that another Rose Bowl appearance might not be out of the question this season.

WSU head coach Mike Price knows the questions are coming, and he's tongue-in-cheek with his answers about the Cougars being the favorites to win the conference title this season. But he knows he has a pretty special quarterback and that recent conference history means those questions are inevitable.

"The first thing people say when they see Jason is not about his armstrength or anything like that. They say 'Wow, he's fun to watch,'" Price says.

Gesser entered this season with 42 career touchdowns and 26 interceptions to go with his 5,422 yards and a 52.4 completion percentage.

Beyond being fun to watch and making opponents and other coaches say "Wow," Gesser has a few other things going for him, and at least one glaring weakness, if you believe Gesser himself.

BY BOYCE GARRISON

"He's a fierce competitor like a Ryan Leaf or a Drew Bledsoe," Price says, referring to two former Cougars. "He's got great escapability. He's an aggressive-type player like a Jake Plummer. He's got a very, very quick release—it takes him just a split second to get the ball off. His mechanics are very good and he doesn't drop the ball down to his side. And he's gotten much, much stronger."

But about that weakness...

"I think there's still a lot of questions about me because of my size," says the 6-1, 200-pound Gesser.

Maybe on the next level, but not in the Pac-10. The questions there are more about the rest of his Washington State teammates.

While the last five top Pac-10 signalcallers were indeed special, they didn't do it all themselves. And Gesser truly understands that.

"It's great to have a mature, senior quarterback out there, but if you look at all the recent top Pac-10 quarterbacks, they all had a great supporting cast," Gesser says. "All of those teams had a great defense to help them out. Regardless of how many points you put on the board on offense, a good defense is going to win half your games for you."

But defenses and even strong special teams won't get it done all the time. Offenses have to put points on the board. In some ways, the old Western Athletic Conference has seeped into the Pac-10. Don't believe it? Check out these scores from the last couple of seasons: 44-38, 46-38, 37-35, 53-47, 44-41.

"As quarterbacks get experience, they learn they have to play at a pretty high level," says Tuiasosopo, now a backup with the Oakland Raiders. "You're also surrounded by a lot of great skill players. They make a quarterback look good."

Tuiasosopo is the eighth straight Washington quarterback to play in the NFL. It might rain a lot in Washington, but they still throw the ball in high school in that state. And in Oregon. And even more so in California, which has also produced its share of quarterbacks. It's not a recent phenomenon. It dates back to the days of Jim Plunkett and John Elway. Even recent defections like Tom Brady (Michigan), Chris Rix (Florida State) and Casey Clausen (Tennessee), who went from California to other conferences, haven't seemed to hurt the Pac-10.

But those high school quarterbacks have to develop once they get to college. And they do in this conference.

Why does the Pac-10 produce so many good quarterbacks?

"It's probably two things," says Bellotti. "We don't have great highs and lows in temperature on the West Coast and rarely have snow. The elements allow you to throw the football year-round. The other thing is the type of skill athletes prevalent in the western United States. It comes down to the style of offenses run in the high schools and in the Pac-10."

So, if not Gesser, then who?

CONTINUED

Palmer? He has mostly disappointed in his four seasons at USC.

That's right, four seasons. Palmer is playing in his fifth season this year. He played in three games as a true sophomore in 1999, then broke his collarbone and received a medical redshirt year.

But coming into the season, Palmer had as many career interceptions (39) as touchdowns. He completed 57.2 percent of his passes, quite a bit better than Gesser, for 7,876 yards. But his record as a starter is just 16-16, including 0-2 in bowl games.

Palmer's career seemed ready to take off as a redshirt sophomore in 2000, when he led the Trojans to a 29-5 win over Penn State in the Kickoff Classic. USC would lose seven of the next 11 games to finish 5-7.

Still, there are those who believe Palmer could put it all together in his final season.

"He would be a guy who could do it," Price says. "He's pretty darn good, pretty talented."

What has derailed Palmer? Some would say it's not all Palmer's fault—the Trojans underachieved as a team. But the great ones find a way, and make those around them better—make the sum of the parts better than the individuals would appear to be.

"It's his senior year," says Washington coach Rick Neuheisel. "He ought to have his best season and, if he does, the Trojans are going to be dangerous."

History would suggest that Washington's Pickett might be a year away. He's only a junior and he played sparingly until last season, when he appeared in 10 games and threw more interceptions (14) than touchdowns (10).

"Selfishly, I hope it's Pickett," Neuheisel says. "He's certainly capable, a guy who has the skills. He needs to spend more time learning the game. If he does that, there's no reason he can't be as good as anybody."

There are others Price and Neuheisel would try to deflect the attention to, away from their guys, like Stanford's Chris Lewis, Cal's Kyle Boller and Oregon State sophomore Derek Anderson.

But Gesser is the odds-on favorite, with Palmer next in line.

"They are going into their senior seasons," Neuheisel says. "It could be their year."

History is certainly on their side. ■

NO SECOND GESSER

Washington State's Jason Gesser is in total command of the Cougars' exciting offense

Jason Gesser was a high school senior when Ryan Leaf was leading Washington State to its first Rose Bowl in 50 years.

Did watching Leaf that season influence him? You bet.

Seeing Leaf throw the ball all around the lot would light up any high school quarterback's eyes. Gesser is now in that same offense, and he's putting up Leaf-like numbers.

Touchdown Illustrated: Is that one of the reasons you went to Washington State?

Jason Gesser: It influenced me in a way because I saw how good the offense could be and I came from a similar offense. It showed me this offense can produce quarterbacks and it led me to believe I could be one of those good quarterbacks coming out of here.

TDI: How would you describe the WSU offense?

JG: It's wide open. You have to understand everything really fast, the reads, the defense's reactions, everything. You have the one back on the field and four receivers or sometimes five receivers. It really spreads the defense out. It makes it a fun game.

TDI: Do you have the ability to change a play from the line of scrimmage once it's sent in?

JG: I have all the freedom in the world to check down to different plays depending on how the defense lines up. But no matter what [the defenses] do, the field is going to be wide open because they have to spread out to cover everyone. And if everyone's covered, I can move up the field on my own to get a first down.

TDI: Does the fact that you play in one corner of the country and do not get much exposure bother you?

JG: Thinking about that kind of stuff will distract you. You've got to earn respect, anyway. No one's going to come around and hand it to you. I'd rather sneak up on people again. I'd like people to think we were one-year wonders.

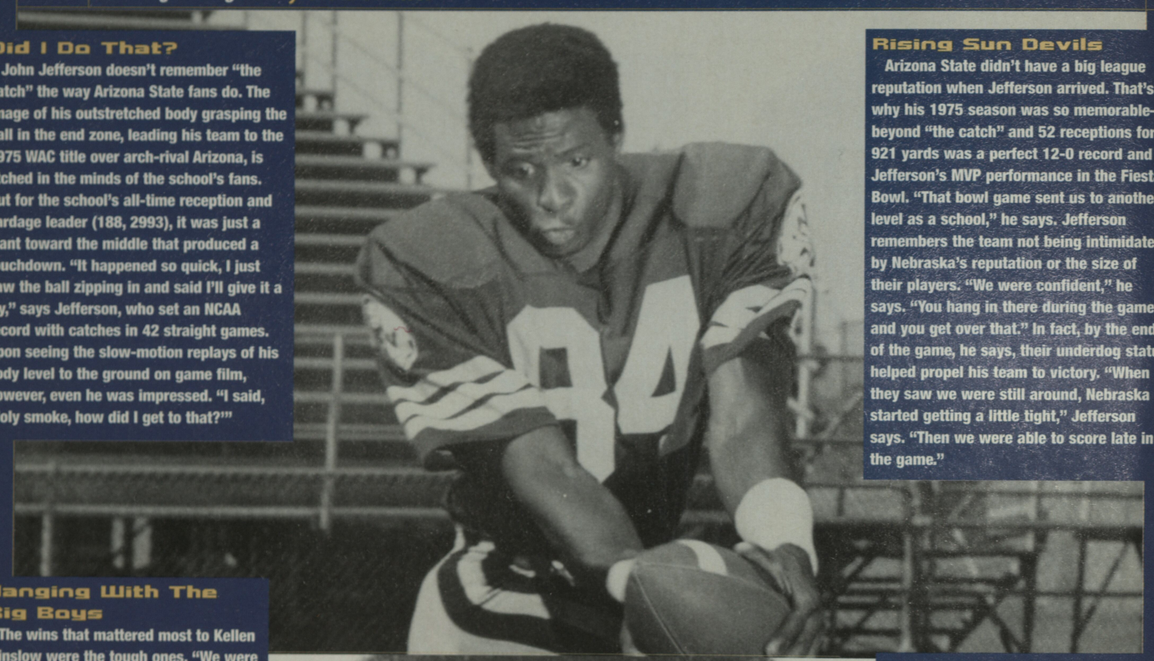
John Jefferson & Kellen Winslow

These two pass-catching Hall of Famers were lighting up the scoreboard long before they were doing the same with the San Diego Chargers By Stuart Miller



Did I Do That?

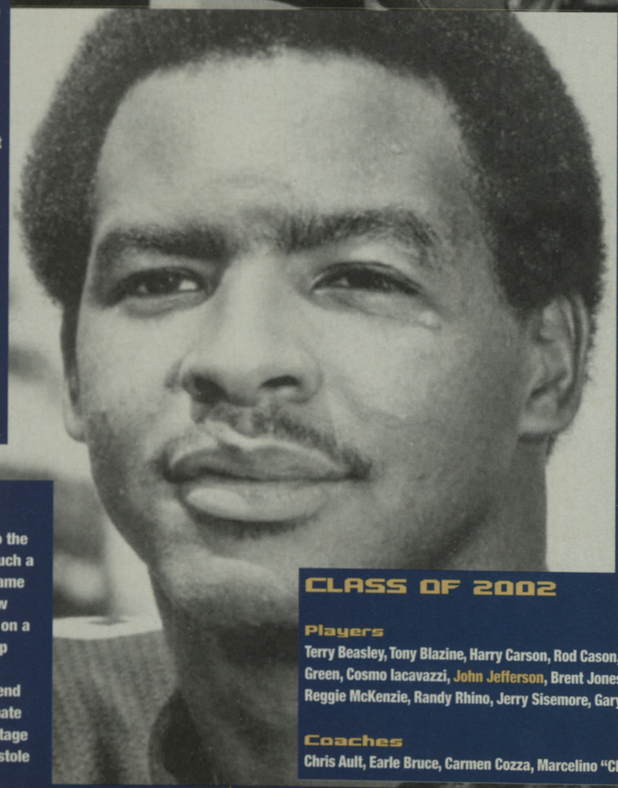
John Jefferson doesn't remember "the catch" the way Arizona State fans do. The image of his outstretched body grasping the ball in the end zone, leading his team to the 1975 WAC title over arch-rival Arizona, is etched in the minds of the school's fans. But for the school's all-time reception and yardage leader (188, 2993), it was just a slant toward the middle that produced a touchdown. "It happened so quick, I just saw the ball zipping in and said I'll give it a try," says Jefferson, who set an NCAA record with catches in 42 straight games. Upon seeing the slow-motion replays of his body level to the ground on game film, however, even he was impressed. "I said, 'Holy smoke, how did I get to that?'"

Rising Sun Devils

Arizona State didn't have a big league reputation when Jefferson arrived. That's why his 1975 season was so memorable—beyond "the catch" and 52 receptions for 921 yards was a perfect 12-0 record and Jefferson's MVP performance in the Fiesta Bowl. "That bowl game sent us to another level as a school," he says. Jefferson remembers the team not being intimidated by Nebraska's reputation or the size of their players. "We were confident," he says. "You hang in there during the game and you get over that." In fact, by the end of the game, he says, their underdog status helped propel his team to victory. "When they saw we were still around, Nebraska started getting a little tight," Jefferson says. "Then we were able to score late in the game."

Hanging With The Big Boys

The wins that mattered most to Kellen Winslow were the tough ones. "We were known for upsetting better-known teams," he says of his days at the University of Missouri, where he caught 71 passes for 1,089 yards and ten touchdowns. He says the team had a special chemistry. "We were a close-knit team; we all came from the same areas around St. Louis, Chicago and Kansas City." Those Tigers also thrived on the challenge of beating the nation's best teams—topping such schools as USC, Alabama, Notre Dame, Ohio State and Arizona State during Winslow's tenure in Columbia. Against Arizona State, Missouri focused on keeping fellow College Football Hall of Fame inductee John Jefferson out of the end zone. "He had 13 catches but no touchdowns and we won 9-0," Winslow recalls.



Thundering Bolts

Having a top-flight tight end will make any wide receiver's job easier. "Kellen came in and changed the game for us," says Jefferson (pictured left) of his NFL days with the San Diego Chargers. "He made safeties stay home in the middle and that opened things up for Charlie Joiner and me outside." Winslow says he loved being JJ's teammate and was "devastated" when Jefferson was traded in 1981. "He'll tell you he taught me how to catch one-handed," Winslow says, adding that he knew how but Jefferson encouraged him to do it more. "We'd play basketball together, sing R&B together. He was the team's emotional leader."

Sweet Liberty

Sure, beating LSU was exciting, but the highlights of Winslow's senior year trip to the Liberty Bowl came off the field. "It was such a fun week in Memphis," he says. "We became much closer as a team." So while Winslow vividly recalls making a shoestring catch on a short corner route, he also relishes his trip to Graceland and eating all that Memphis barbecue. Best of all was seeing soul legend Al Green perform, especially when teammate Kenny Blair, a master mimic, jumped on stage with Green and impersonated him. "That stole the show," Winslow says.

Full of Confidence

On the football field, Onterrio Smith believes he can accomplish anything. Will that translate into Heisman hardware for Oregon's star tailback? By Scott Wolf

COURTESY UNIVERSITY OF OREGON

Oregon tailback Onterrio Smith doesn't mind being considered a Heisman Trophy candidate; he just doesn't think a mere mention does him justice.

"I believe I'm the best tailback in the nation, that's the way I think," Smith said. "By far, I think I'm the best in the Pac-10."

This might sound like just another football player inflating his worth, looking for a little hype and national recognition after one good year.

But before dismissing Smith's opinion, consider what he told Oregon head coach Mike Bellotti before last season.

"I told him I would gain between 800 and 1,000 yards and score between eight and 13 touchdowns," Smith said.

Bellotti was dumbfounded that a redshirt sophomore who had not played a down for Oregon would make such a brash prediction.

"He looked at me like, 'C'mon now,'" Smith said.

Smith looked like a prophet after last season, however, gaining 1,058 yards and scoring 10 touchdowns. He also had a school-record 285 yards and three touchdowns against Washington State and was an integral reason that Oregon finished 2001 ranked No. 2 in the nation.

So following spring practice this year, Smith returned to Bellotti's office with new projections for his junior season.

"I'm looking at anything over 1,700 yards and more than 20 touchdowns, along with a few hundred receiving yards," Smith said.

What was Bellotti's reaction? "He just looked at me and gave me a smile this time," Smith said.

There are few skeptics in Eugene, Ore., regarding Smith's talents these days.

"I don't think people think I'm cocky because they [believe] I can do it too," Smith said.

Smith arrived at Oregon with little fanfare after transferring from Tennessee, since the Ducks already possessed All-Pac-10 tailback Maurice Morris. But the pair almost perfectly split playing time last season, with Smith gaining nine more yards and averaging 6.0 per carry, compared to Morris' 5.8.

More impressively to Bellotti, Smith became friends with Morris, and the tailbacks cheered for each other during games.

"For me, as a coach, it's like watching your children have pride in each other, and it is one of the greatest things you could ever see," Bellotti said.

It wasn't too difficult for anyone who was part of the Oregon program to envision Smith making such a big splash; they just wondered if the talent he showed during his first spring practice would translate to actual games.

Onterrio Smith set a school record with 285 rushing yards in a game against Washington State last season.

"He was the best scout-team player we ever had," Oregon assistant coach Steve Greatwood said. "No one could touch him."

Smith quickly earned the nickname "one-a-day" in spring practice.

"They called me that because I made someone look bad once a day at practice," Smith said. "I caught a lot of eyes with my elusive moves because a lot of people had not seen me."

Although Oregon has featured some highly regarded tailbacks recently, like Morris and Reuben Droughns, Smith draws comments that still sound surprising.

"He's the best open field runner I've ever seen," Greatwood said.

And maybe one of the most fearless. Smith's patience to wait for holes is not exactly the first thing his teammates think about when they describe him.

Former Ducks quarterback Joey Harrington said Smith is a "freight train coming downhill."

When Smith set the school record for rushing against the

 In limited action during his freshman season at Tennessee, Smith gained 189 yards on 31 attempts and scored four touchdowns.

Cougars, he showed all of his strengths. He had touchdown runs of 73 and 41 yards, but perhaps most impressively, he scored on an eight-yard run where he ran over the Washington State safety.

"He brings it all," Greatwood said. "He has speed and quickness. His instincts and vision are excellent."

With Morris using up his eligibility, Smith will be the centerpiece of the Ducks' offense this season.

So far, about the only person who can stop Smith is himself. He graduated from Grant High in Sacramento, Calif., after rushing for 3,154 yards and scoring 60 touchdowns. He verbally committed to Oregon, but he made his final college visit to Tennessee and decided he wanted to play with his close friend, wide receiver Donte Stallworth, who was also from Sacramento.

He gained 189 yards for the Volunteers and scored four touchdowns, but the following spring, newspapers in Tennessee reported that Smith tested positive for using marijuana. He later admitted the reports were true.

"I should have grown up and realized what I had at stake," Smith said. "Being 18, I was away from home for the first time. Things happened."

After leaving Tennessee, he thought of playing for several Pac-10 schools but decided that Oregon would be the natural choice.

"I wanted to go to Oregon because of my relationships with the coaches," Smith said. "I knew they had a legit chance to be successful, but not this good."

It seemed like Smith had put his problems behind him at Oregon. But one week before training camp started, Smith was cited for drunken driving. Eventually, Bellotti suspended him for two halves during the first two games of the season.

"I felt I was already walking on eggshells when I came here. I was already under the scope from the first day," Smith said. "I felt that I just had put my career in jeopardy again, but Coach Bellotti and me talked it out."

OPENING ACT

Here's a look at the accolades Onterrio Smith earned in his first campaign with the Ducks:

- Pac-10 Second-Team running back
- Pac-10 Second-Team kickoff returner
- Len Casanova Award (Oregon's top newcomer)
- Pac-10 Offensive Player of the Week (Oct. 27 at Washington State)

Smith says his problems were part of a "maturing process" and that he no longer has drug or alcohol problems.

"I just stopped the partying and wildness," Smith said. "It wasn't a big adjustment."

Stallworth said he hopes Smith has "learned from this lesson."

Smith knows even if he stays out of trouble, NFL teams will make inquiries into his background to make sure he won't be a future liability.

"Once I get interviewed and tell teams where I'm coming from, I'll be all right," Smith said. "I've matured enough and learned."

The key question is when Smith will turn pro. He has another year of eligibility remaining but is unlikely to stay if he meets this year's goals.

"It's going to depend on my season," Smith said. "If I hit my numbers, it'll be a big possibility."

In the meantime, the Ducks are glad to have him this season. Even if he's not mentioned prominently as a preseason Heisman favorite, Smith thinks he can change that quickly.

"I'll try to give them no other choice," he said. "I want to give them what they haven't seen before. I'm trying to rewrite the record books."

And if no one places the spotlight on Smith, he's ready to take matters into his own hands.

"It doesn't bother me if people don't say my name. I'll say it myself," Smith said. "That's just confidence in myself; I've had it since my freshman year at Tennessee. There's no way I can limit what I do. I just need to have an outrageous season."

If Smith continues to back up what he says, look out! ■

A LOST VOLUNTEER

If certain circumstances hadn't forced Onterrio Smith to transfer, the Tennessee Volunteers' running attack would have been simply dominant

As much as Tennessee coveted tailback Onterrio Smith when he was in high school, even the Volunteers coaches were surprised at how talented Smith was when he arrived from Sacramento, Calif., in 1999.

"I don't think we knew how good he really was," Tennessee assistant coach Mike Barry said. "When you're recruiting a kid from that distance, you're a little apprehensive. We had gotten [wide receiver] Donte Stallworth from Sacramento and we had a bit of an edge at the time recruiting Smith. But he really lit it up his freshman year."

There was little mystery that Smith would have been the marquee tailback his sophomore season for the Volunteers following a successful freshman season.

"He just got better and better," Barry said. "Without a doubt he would have started."

But Smith was forced to leave Tennessee during the spring of his freshman year after violating team rules. Although he gained 189 yards for the Volunteers and scored four touchdowns as a freshman, Smith eventually transferred to Oregon.

"He just got in some trouble here," Barry said.

Tennessee managed to survive without Smith. Last year, tailback Travis Stephens gained 1,464 yards and earned All-America honors.

But imagine how dangerous Tennessee would have been with both of them playing in the backfield. —SW

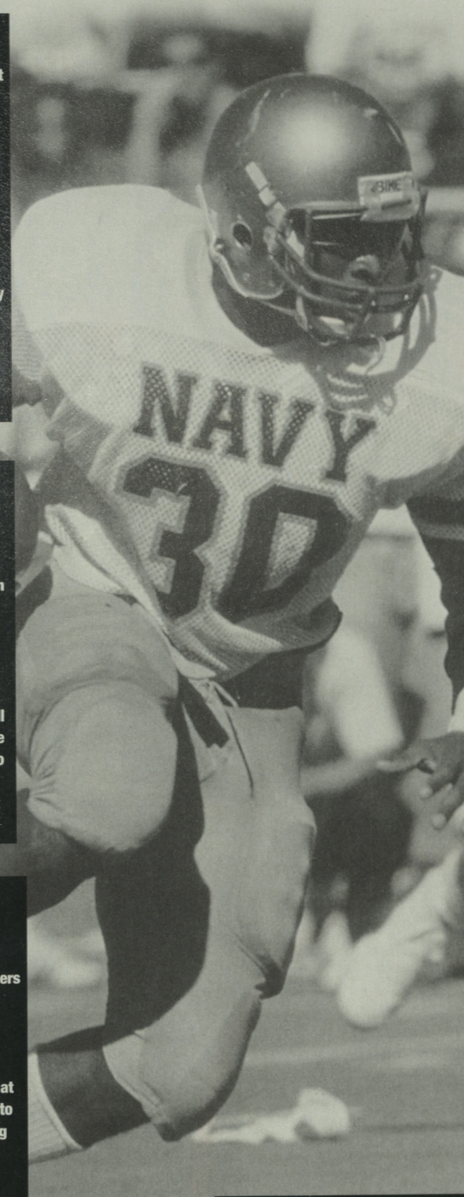
HALL OF FAME SPOTLIGHT

Napoleon McCallum

One of the Naval Academy's most gifted backs showed great pride for his country and on the gridiron

By Kevin Newell



The Right Stuff

Napoleon McCallum was an honest-to-goodness football star—a poster boy for everything that was right about the proverbial student-athlete. While playing at the United States Naval Academy from 1983-85, the 2002 College Football Hall of Fame inductee did it all. "It's a real honor to be inducted with the class of guys I'll be going in with," said McCallum. "Some of my old college teammates e-mailed me to congratulate me. That meant a lot." The Cincinnati native was a two-time consensus All-America, finishing sixth in the Heisman Trophy voting in '83 and eighth in '85. What's more, McCallum, the Most Valuable Player in the '85 Blue-Gray Game and the '86 Senior Bowl, ranks second all-time with 7,172 career all-purpose yards on the Division I-A level. He also ranks among the all-time top 20 in all-purpose yards per game (216.8) and total all-purpose yards (2,385) in a single season.

As Advertised

McCallum was a football legend at the famed Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md. The elusive tailback, a co-captain in 1985, set 26 school rushing and return records, including single-season rushing yards (1,587) and career marks for rushing yards (4,179), kick return yards (2,197) and punt return yards (858). McCallum was a marked man by the opposition. While he played in many collegiate games, one remains vivid in his recollection. "I remember a real big game against Pittsburgh at home during my junior year," McCallum said. "I was playing against another All-American—Bill Maas. I had butterflies leading up to the game because Sports Illustrated had just done a big spread on me. So it was a game that you had to perform big in just to live up to that article. I wound up playing real well but we still lost the game."

Pros And Cons

Despite a five-year commitment to the Navy, McCallum was drafted by the then-Los Angeles Raiders in the fourth round of the 1986 draft. As luck would have it, the Navy pulled some strings, allowing McCallum to be stationed at the nearby Long Beach, Calif., naval base. He went on to have a solid rookie campaign with the Raiders, rushing for 536 yards on 142 carries and one touchdown. McCallum would miss the next four years due to his military obligations before returning to the Raiders in '90. But it wasn't until '93 that he began to display the promise he once held, with a three-touchdown performance against the Denver Broncos in the playoffs, and then two more against the Buffalo Bills in the AFC Championship Game. Sadly, McCallum's professional career ended abruptly when he suffered a gruesome knee injury in the first game of the '94 season vs. the San Francisco 49ers on Monday Night Football. "The sad thing is I felt I had begun playing really good," said McCallum. "Instead, I'll be remembered for one of the worst football injuries ever televised."

The Game

Say what you will about Nebraska-Oklahoma or Michigan-Ohio State, no collegiate football game is bigger than Army-Navy. The history, lore and pomp and circumstance are unmatched—not to mention, seeing the Cadets and Midshipmen, in full dress, pack the stands to root for their beloved teams. McCallum had a front-row seat for four games, capped by being carried off the field by his teammates his senior season. "That game lasts the whole year. It starts [when] you're a freshman and it stays with you until the time you graduate," he said. "When that game comes around, then you realize how big it is. You have the entire Navy cheering you and counting on you. Then you learn that the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of Defense are going to be at the game. Then you hear about how all the different branches of the Armed Services are looking forward to that game. That game is the biggest rivalry ever."

Working Man

After a failed comeback attempt, McCallum, who still suffers the effects of seven surgeries for the injury that was diagnosed as a dislocated knee, ruptured artery and three of four damaged ligaments, pondered his future. Faced with the possibility of never walking again, and a chance that his leg might have to be amputated, he started a fledgling computer graphics company with his wife, Yvonne, in 1995. "I had always had a love for computers and graphics," McCallum said. "While I was recovering, I thought about a career after football and figured this was something I always wanted to do. And it helped that I wouldn't have to stand up when I worked. I could just sit down at the computer." What began as a small business from their one-time home in Redondo Beach, Calif., has since become Digital Pro Graphics, a Las Vegas-based company that specializes in electronically producing full-color images for interior and exterior use, such as vehicle wraps, banners and advertising signs. The McCallums and their daughter, Breanna, reside in Henderson, Nev.

Looking for the nation's hottest recruits? Recent history says to spend some time in Florida, Southern California and Texas By Michael Bradley

Southern Comfort

Ed Orgeron is gloating.

"I'm driving up to Malibu on a beautiful Southern California day," he chirps into his cell phone. One imagines the top is down, and the wind is tickling his forehead. "Up ahead, I see a palm tree, a white-sand beach, some surfers and some girls in bikinis."

Thanks, Ed. The rest of us will go back to our mundane lives and dream about your world.

At least other college football recruiters get a chance to experience some of that SoCal magic. They don't live it every day, like Orgeron, a USC assistant, but they'll take a few doses of it each May, or once the prep season starts in late summer. They're hoping to tap into the pipeline of talent that flows freely from Los Angeles and its dense surrounding counties. It's a great place to live and an even more attractive place to go looking for football talent.

"It's a hotbed of recruiting," Orgeron says. "We have a large population base, and a lot of schools to hit."

California is like the recruiting equivalent of the Mall of America. Step into Running Back World for the latest 225-pounder with 4.4 speed. Need a quarterback? Well, head up the escalator to Passers 'R' Us and grab a drop-back specialist or an option wizard. The Golden State has it all.

So does Texas. And Florida. When it comes to stocking Division I-A rosters, those three states do it better than anybody else. Their combination of dense population centers, hundreds of high schools and nearly year-round training opportunities combine to produce huge crops of talent. The in-state schools build each class around a big nucleus of homegrowns and then pick and choose some stars from other locales. Meanwhile, other programs make regular treks to those Meccas, salivating over the available prospects and wishing they had the same riches in their backyards.

"[Florida State head coach Bobby] Bowden always says that even if we sign the maximum recruits—25—all from Florida, and Miami and Florida do the same thing, that's just 75 players," says FSU tight ends coach and recruiting coordinator John Lilly. "There are 150 or more I-A players in Florida every year.

"There is never an excuse for Florida State, Miami or Florida to be bad at football, because we're surrounded by so many great players. The only thing that can kill you is bad decisions on players."

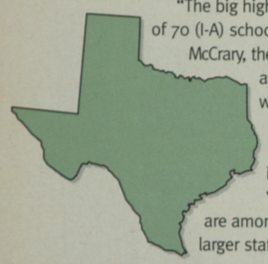
COURTESY TEXAS CHRISTIAN UNIVERSITY

One of Texas' top prep tailbacks ever, LaDainian Tomlinson always made running with the football look this easy.

Passion Play

Hardee McCrary never has to worry about being lonely on the road during the May evaluation period.

"The big high schools in Texas have coaches from a minimum of 70 (I-A) schools come by in the spring," he says.



McCrary, the defensive ends coach and recruiting coordinator at Texas, is a Lone Star native, so he knows about why the state produces so many players each year. Numbers play a role. So does the great coaching at the prep level that often produces the best linemen in the nation.

"The staffs at some of the high schools in Texas are among the best in the country," he says. "Some have larger staffs than colleges."

There is plenty of funding available, and great facilities abound. But there's more. And it isn't so easy to pinpoint.

"This state has a tradition of toughness associated with being part of the American West," says McCrary, a former high school history teacher who has a degree in political science. "People like Sam Houston and Stephen F. Austin helped take a rich piece of land and turn it into a great state.

"People here are into toughness and competitiveness. That's why we've been so successful at ranching and the oil business."

UT does its best to tap into that pride by hitting recruits with plenty of that old Texas spirit, burnt orange style. McCrary and the other Longhorn coaches pitch recruits on the school's tradition, which headman Mack Brown says "never graduates." Maybe an 18-year-old kid doesn't know about legendary Texas coach Darrell Royal or Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell, but his daddy probably does. That's something those interlopers from other states can't offer. That doesn't mean they're not coming into Texas. But McCrary and his fellow staffers are going to make sure they defend the home turf. So far, so good. The 2001 Longhorn roster had 107 players, 93 of whom were from Texas.

"You'd be completely off your rocker if you didn't look here first," McCrary says.

The Extra Season

When Florida prep stars arrive on college campuses, they have an advantage many of their peers to the north don't.

"Because players practice for a month in the spring from eighth grade through junior year, they're almost getting another complete football season," Lilly says.

That's a pretty good reason why Florida's I-A schools have such an advantage. They're getting players with more experience than many of their rivals. And the talent streaming in, particularly at the skill positions, is exceptional to begin with. In addition to the spring practice, many of the players develop more quickly because of the training they receive as members of track teams.

"Don't even go to schools until the middle of May, because the best players are still out competing in the track season," Lilly says.

That extra work adds speed and increases athletic ability, two qualities that translate directly to the football field.

Lilly and the other FSU coaches begin their recruiting efforts in Florida and sell the opportunity to be part of the programs and rivalries young men have been following since their earliest days. Whereas Lilly may try to convince a player from another state that it's time to spread his wings and move away from home, he's selling Florida products on the allure of playing in their backyards.

"When you have grown up in the state and known guys who have been part of the great rivalries here, and you've watched the games forever and you may know a lot of the people you'll be playing with and against, you have a little more feel for it all," Lilly says.

Edgerrin James	Immokalee	Miami
Ray Lewis	Lakeland	Miami
Warren Sapp	Plymouth	Miami
Peter Warrick	Bradenton	Florida State

Derrick Brooks (No. 10), currently a Pro Bowl linebacker in the NFL, was one in a pipeline of great linebackers to come from the state of Florida in recent years.

Picking A Winner

Orgeron isn't just about the sunshine and fun times in California. He knows his numbers, too.

"Last year, 498 players from California went to Division I programs," he says.

That's a staggering amount and represents the wealth of talent available to schools like USC—and just about any other program with some available frequent-flier mileage. But with population centers like Los Angeles, San Francisco/Oakland and San Diego in the state, one would expect to have plenty of choices. The big challenge for Orgeron and his pals is selecting the right players every year and getting them to commit to USC.

"The evaluation part is the biggest part of it all," Orgeron says. "We have no problem finding young men who want to come to USC. The key is getting the right ones."

Orgeron uses an example from his days at the University of Miami to illustrate how important it is to project how well a player will perform down the road, and at what position. Warren Sapp came to Miami as a tight end who had played quarterback until eighth grade.

"We knew what Warren Sapp was going to be, but he didn't," Orgeron says. "It took a lot of coaxing to get him to be a defensive lineman."

USC starts its evaluation process with freshmen and sophomores. Orgeron and the other coaches visit every school in the state at least once a year to find the right people.

Of course, once you find the right ones, it isn't always easy to land them.

"Sometimes, you have to recruit 10 running backs to get two," he says. "But you have to be confident. At USC, we believe we do a thorough job."

That's good, because there is plenty of competition. ■

They are constantly compared to their famous fathers. Truthfully, how could they hope to measure up? It seems like an unfair burden. But not to Jarrett Payton and Kellen Winslow II, the University of Miami's football prodigies.

The comparisons? They are compliments. Sometimes, they are friendly reminders that entering the family business can become an unexpected treat. Even when your father is an NFL icon. Even when his likeness has been bronzed at the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Walter Payton was a high-stepping, pile-driving running back for the Chicago Bears. He was "Sweetness" personified. Entering this season, he was still the NFL's all-time leading rusher. He's fondly remembered as the ultimate teammate, a player who carried an entire franchise upon his back, then delighted in its eventual climb to a championship.

Kellen Winslow was a physical marvel at tight end for the San Diego Chargers. His position, once awarded to those who strictly blocked and caught dump-off passes, evolved into one of game-breaking deployment. He refused to set limits and played with great imagination. Defenders were stunned that such a large man could move so well.

GETTY IMAGES/JONATHAN DANIEL

Jarrett Payton, here speaking at Walter's memorial service at Soldier Field, feels proud of, not pressured by, the comparisons being made to his father.

Payton and Winslow. Those enduring names can't be forgotten. Especially now.

Get ready, college football fans. Here come the sons.

Jarrett Payton, a junior running back, is a package of swiftness and power who now wears No. 34 (just like his dad).

Kellen Winslow II is a sophomore tight end who might be his team's most athletic offensive weapon (just like his dad).

They have become more than world-class curiosities. Their performances have become vital to UM's hopes of defending its national championship.

Payton is expected to be one of the Hurricanes' primary ball carriers, perhaps filling the cleats of Clinton Portis, an early departure for the NFL Draft. Winslow is slotted to start at tight end, which had been the role of Jeremy Shockey, an All-American and NFL first-round selection.

The next Portis? The next Shockey? There go those comparisons again.

Don't worry. The kids don't mind.

"I always wanted to be like my father," the younger Winslow said. "He tells me I'm more athletic than he was. I don't remember much about his NFL career because I was too young. But I've seen some films of him. I think it looks a lot like me on the field. If I could accomplish what he did, I'd be very happy."

There are times when UM coaches just shake their heads when watching Jarrett Payton. The moves, the instincts and the toughness seem so familiar.

"I've seen people bounce off him and [I've] just said, 'Wow!'" said Miami running backs coach Don Soldinger. "It's sort of Payton-esque. You watch Jarrett a little bit in practice and you're going to say, 'Man, who is that guy? He's a football player.' So I think the comparison is very valid."

Payton's career has been checkered with inconsistency and tragedy. As a freshman, his father's declining health consumed his attention. Walter Payton died at age 45 of a rare liver disease and cancer on Nov. 1, 1999. Just like the Hall of Fame induction and initial news of his serious illness, the son was by his side.

The younger Payton returned to campus two days after the funeral and soon had the best game of his season (20 carries for 87 yards) against Rutgers. He scored on a 16-yard run when he lost two defenders on a spin move, then sprinted into the end zone. He pounded his chest twice and pointed toward the sky, saluting his father.

Payton's flashes of freshman brilliance faded away, leading to two years of relative dormancy. His football focus drifted during extended grieving over his father's death, then he took a redshirt season. He cut his foot on some coral and was forced to miss all of spring football in 2001. More adjustments: He was shifted to fullback. Last season, he rushed for just 26 yards.

But his past has passed. He's back at tailback. He's healthy and eager.

People forget that Payton is only in his sixth season of organized football. At St. Viator of Arlington Heights, Ill., he began as a high-school soccer player with no real designs on becoming a gridiron star. Then came football's gravitational pull. "It would've been like Pele's son not trying soccer," one of Payton's coaches said.

Payton said his father never pushed the game, but was always available to answer questions and lend advice.

"When I was in high school, it was hard to be compared [to my father]," Payton said. "Now, it's not so hard. I'm used to it. It makes me stronger as a person and makes me tougher inside, and when I have the ball and I'm running, I feel like him a little bit.

"Being in the shadow of someone so great, you can never ask for anything else. People get compared to other people all the time, but I'm getting compared to my dad, a Hall of Famer. That makes me feel good."

Soldinger and UM head coach Larry Coker agree on the player's vast potential. "Jarrett is one of the most talented kids we've ever had on our roster," Coker said.

Payton just needs to consistently display that talent.

"The key is going to be his mental adjustment to a greater role," Soldinger said. "It can't be just one great play. It has to be play after play after play—the type of single-mindedness that his father had. Sometimes, I kid with him and say, 'If your father was here, he'd kick your butt and make you work harder.'

"I think Jarrett maybe doesn't realize how good he is. He's never been in that tough situation, where it's fourth-and-one and he's got to get the first down to keep the drive going. He has questioned his ability. But I think he's getting it now. He knows it's his time now."

That's also true for Winslow.

Before last season's national championship game in the Rose Bowl, when Miami defeated Nebraska, 37-14, Shockey confided in Winslow. With Shockey, a junior at the time, looking to leave early for the NFL, that meant Winslow, who had dabbled at wide receiver, had an opening at tight end.

An opening he pounced upon. Winslow was ultra-productive during spring practice. He caught three passes for 57 yards during the spring game and earned words of high praise from quarterback Ken Dorsey.

"Kellen's a great player," Dorsey said. "He's going to be a special player to the point where he has the potential to be better than Shockey. He's such a big target and he uses his athletic ability so well. I'm very excited about his future."

Like Payton, Winslow wasn't dragged to the football field at a preadolescent age. He didn't play until his freshman season at Scripps Ranch High School in San Diego, much to the delight of his father, who wanted him to experience a wide range of activities.

When he experienced football, though, one thing became evident: he wanted to be the best.

"It was hard at the beginning because I had to live up to my expectations of what I wanted to do and what everyone wanted me to be," Winslow said. "I just thought I had to be the greatest and do it all at once."

COURTESY UNIVERSITY OF MIAMI

Watching Kellen Winslow II play tight end in the Orange Bowl brings back memories of his father's performance there in the 1982 AFC Championship Game.

Winslow said he was sometimes taunted by opposing players in high school, the ones who knew his father's name and reputation. Winslow didn't shy away, usually slinging back his own heated words, then trying to offer an on-field response.

And now?

"I'm not sure if the kids in college have a lot of familiarity with Kellen Winslow," Winslow said. "I don't think that's relevant. Jarrett and I are just players at the University of Miami. I think we're going to sink or swim based on what we do, not based on whether our fathers played in the NFL. That's the way it should be."

Still, Payton doesn't mind the comparisons. When he grew up, his father's smiling image was displayed on television, billboards and T-shirts. In one respect, "Sweetness" belonged to the world. But he was still the guy who bounced Jarrett on his knee.

"It's very sad to have lost my father when I did," Payton said. "But he'll always be with me. I think he watches over me even now."

Winslow still leans on his father's words, but recollections of the NFL playing days have faded. He has read up on his father's exploits, though, especially the classic AFC playoff game against the Miami Dolphins in 1982. The elder Winslow caught 13 passes for 166 yards that afternoon. He also blocked a potential game-winning field-goal attempt by Miami and played himself into near-exhaustion during the double-overtime contest.

When the Chargers prevailed, 41-38, Winslow was helped off the field by two teammates. A photograph of that moment has become synonymous with maximum effort.

The younger Winslow now plays his home games on that same field—the Orange Bowl.

"That's kind of crazy," Winslow said. "The scene of my dad's greatest game and here I am. I just think it's a coincidence. Who knows if I could ever have a game like that? I don't think my dad thinks about that and neither do I.

"He just wants me to be happy and represent myself with class. He wants me to get a good education and use football to my advantage. That's the best part. People think it's a lot of pressure living up to the name. In fact, it's a big advantage for me to have the father that I do. He has prepared me well for these times."

Winslow said he has grown close to Payton, but not for the reasons you might imagine.

"We do have things in common with our backgrounds, but our fathers aren't the main reason we get along," Winslow said. "We like to have a good time. We like video games. We like girls.

"And I think we have a pretty big desire to make a name for ourselves in the game of football."

Sound familiar? It should. ■

YET ANOTHER?

Former Oklahoma great Lee Roy Selmon, currently athletics director at South Florida, can attest to Payton and Winslow's situation

At the University of Oklahoma, Lee Roy Selmon terrorized opponents as an All-American defensive end. He became the No. 1 draft pick for the NFL's Tampa Bay Buccaneers and a perennial Pro Bowler. In 1995, he was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Obviously, he knows football. And if Selmon were to assemble his all-time dream team, he'd select two players without hesitation.

Walter Payton, a longtime nemesis, the late running back for the Chicago Bears, and Kellen Winslow, the sleek tight end for the San Diego Chargers.

"Those were special players and special men," said Selmon, who is now athletics director at the University of South Florida, located in Tampa. "Those are names that mean something in football. You don't see them very often."

Unless, of course, you look at Miami's football roster and see Jarrett Payton, junior running back, and Kellen Winslow II, sophomore tight end.

"My goodness, how did that happen?" Selmon said with a laugh. "Miami is the benefactor of some excellent recruiting. Those are some pretty special bloodlines.

"It's kind of like when the doctor's son enters the medical field. I know their fathers and families are very proud. But I think it's important to remember that they're trying to make a name for themselves. Trying to operate in the father's shadow is not what this is all about."

Selmon knows from first-hand experience.

His son, Lee Roy Jr., is a defensive lineman for USF. The son wears No. 93 (his dad's number at OU) and plays in the same town where the name "Lee Roy Selmon" became synonymous with football excellence.

A pressure-packed situation? Maybe. But Selmon, the father, keeps his distance, even though he's the school's AD.

"I'm done with football, so none of this should be about us," Selmon said. "My son made the choice to play football because it was something he enjoyed. I never wanted to push him into it.

"Playing sports is like a snapshot of life. Every day is not going to be a good day. You have to learn from adversity and rebound from failure. There are enough expectations without having to worry about becoming the next Walter Payton or the next Kellen Winslow. The son isn't going to be exactly like the father, even when people try to portray it that way."

But what about those bloodlines?

"They're a factor somewhat," Selmon said. "I'm sure Jarrett and Kellen are products of their environment. But at this point, especially in college football, it's about the choices they make and their individual aspirations. Nothing is going to be handed to them. They have to work hard, just like any other player."

For young Payton and Winslow, working hard and excelling in football is just another way to maintain the distinguished family name. —JJ

THE OPTIMIST CREED PROMISE YOURSELF:

- To be so strong that nothing can disturb your peace of mind.
- To talk health, happiness and prosperity to every person you meet.
- To make all your friends feel that there is some thing in them.
- To look at the sunny side of everything and make your optimism come true.
- To think only of the best, to work only for the best and expect only the best.
- To be just as enthusiastic about the success of others as you are about your own.
- To forget the mistakes of the past and press on to the greater achievements of the future.
- To wear a cheerful countenance at all times and give every living creature you meet a smile.
- To give so much time to the improvement of yourself that you have no time to criticize others.
- To be too large for worry, too noble for anger, too strong for fear and too happy to permit the presence of trouble.

The Varsity Club is a group of alumni, parents, corporations and friends of Salisbury University athletics. The purpose of the Varsity Club is to support the University's intercollegiate athletics program. The primary focus of that support is fundraising, through membership and special events for the enhancement of the athletics program. While providing this support, NCAA, athletic conference and University regulations will be followed.
